

PUMPKIN PATIENTS — It might look as if a bunch of pumpkins are ailing the day before Halloween. But actually, they're the results of a pumpkin carving contest at St. Joseph Hospital. About 75 hospital employees Thursday carved their creations in hopes of winning one of three prizes to be given
